

MCS in Arctic Greenland

The first meeting of the new MCS group in Greenland

MCS is not just a problem in heavily populated areas of the globe, but can also strike in the Arctic.

A new MCS support group for people in Greenland was created November 25, 2009 at a meeting in the capital of Nuuk. The meeting was held at the Qorsussuaq school, spearheaded by Rikke Østergaard Olsen, Apate Sandgren and Hanne Kleinschmidt.

The new organization has already been quoted in the local media and met with politicians about limiting fragrances in public spaces. The group intends to develop educational materials in the Greenlandic language to educate the public.

More stories

More stories about people with MCS available at www.eiwellspring.org/facesandstories.html

Source

The March 2010 issue of MCSinfo, a publication of the Danish organization MCS Foreningen (www.mcsforeningen.dk)

2010